THE

IMPOSTOR Detected;

The Performance, from whence all the following Barbarenies and Contradictions of this Impolior are curred Hair Rettled, A Letter to the Rev. Dr. Convers Micheleon, ecospeted by COUNTERFEIT SAINT ture d'infide out.

Price One Shilling.

ADVERTISEMENT.

The Performance, from whence all the following Blasphemies and Contradictions of this Impostor are extracted, is intitled, A Letter to the Rev. Dr. Conyers Middleton, occasioned by bis late Free Enquiry, Anno. 1749. From Page 196 to the End.

IMPOSTOR

DETECTED;

OR, THE

COUNTERFEIT SAINT

Turn'd infide out.

Containing a full Discovery of the horrid Blasphemies, and Impieties, taught by those diabolical Seducers called Methodists, under Colour of the only real Christianity.

Particularly intended for the Use of the City of Canterbury, where that Mystery of Iniquity has lately begun to work.

By JOHN KIRKBY, RECTOROF BLACK MANSTONE in Kent.

By their Fruits ye shall know them. Matth. vii. 20.

LONDON:

Printed for M. Cooper, at the Globe in Paternoster Row.

MDCCL.

IMPOSTOR

DETECTED;

SHT ,SO

COUNTERFEIT SAINT

Turn'd infide out.

Containing a full Discovery of the horrid Blasphenics, and Impieties, taught by those diabolical Seducers called Marhonsons, under Colour of the only real Christianity.

Particularly intended for the Use of the City of Canterbury, where that Mystery of Iniquity has lately begun to work.

By JOHN KHRKET, RECTOROSE IN Kent.

By their Pruits yeshall know them. Matth. vii. 20.

Printed for M. Commission Like Globe in Pater-

Things bring always to differning Perforts a Name, which on the Hirtory is always refente

IMPOSTOR Detected;

Tatte. And this Suboleth is of to much more Advantage to theic Him Mos how wanted thin it heretolore was to the carnel ones; that it is a large of the train is a large of the train of the carnel of the theoretical training theorem of Defences.

Presume I need produce no Arguments to prove, that of all the Enemies of Christianity, they are most to be detested, who secretly dart their Poison against it under a Mask of Sanctity: nor am I assaid of any Blame I can incur, by stripping off the Covering from any of those Seducers, who thus make it their Business to deceive the Unwary.

These Persons carry indeed three distinguishing Marks always along with them, by which they may as certainly be known, as some noxious Animals by the Rankness of their Smell.

The first is a peculiar Affectation of expressing themselves throughout all their Discourse, in Scripture Terms; that they may create in their Hearers the highest Opinion of their extraordinary Piety. Which nauseous Abuse of sacred B Things, Things, being always to difcerning Persons a manifest Discovery of their base Hypocrify, is for that Reason in Detestation called Cant. A Name, which on the contrary is always refented on their Parts, as if seemingly out of the tender Pity they have for Men's Unhappiness, in giving such an Instance of their depraved Tafte. And this Sibboleth is of fo much more Advantage to these spiritual Ephraimites, than it heretofore was to the carnel ones; that it is the grand Fucus by which they always colour over their Impostures to delude the Ignorant. It is also their never-failing Weapon of Defence, whenever they find themselves engaged with the more Knowing. For upon these Occasions their constant Afylum is to flee to figurative Expressions of Scripture only, and such as can by any Force be wrested to a Meaning as double as their own Hearts. Of which they have always a fufficient Store to retreat to upon every Occasion; and their whole Art confifts in dexteroully sculking first behind one, and then another, till they have quite wearied out their Opposers: After which they never fail to triumph for having gained the Honour of a new Conquest. And so far they are in the Right; and we have fufficient Experience to convince us, that whoever is so imprudent as to encounter with fuch Proteus's thus upon their own Ground, is well nigh as fure of being this Way defeated, as he that attempts to fight fight with his Shadow, or catch hold of a Beam of the Sun.

The fecond visible Mark by which these Seducers may be known with equal Certainty, is their constant Practice of having all their Actions of Religion perform'd as publicly as possible in the Eyes of the World. To infinuate themselves into the good Opinion of the Multitude is the grand End of all their outside Piety; and the less every Action of this Kind is known, the less by them it is always valued. By which they make it abundantly evident to the Eyes of any discerning Person, that the Aim of their Devotion is to draw the Minds of Men rather to the Worship of themselves, than the Worship of God.

A third Mark which these Persons carry always along with them is the highest Pretension of their intimate Acquaintance with God and heavenly Things; and a visible Contempt of all that differ from them; as a low Rank of Animals, destitute of the least Sense of Things spiritual. And this haughty Contempt is usually expressed by a distainful Sneer peculiar to themselves, which they wou'd always have interpreted to be in pure Pity for Men's Blindness.

In short they in every Respect as exactly suit with the Character which our Lord has given of the Pharisees, as one Tally suits with another. And yet they can be as free in exclaiming

n

e

pholic

ing against the Wickedness of those Hypocrites; as some lewd Women are known to be against the Shamefulness of their Trade: This they are forced to do, to avoid being ranked among a Class of Men, which were certainly detefted by Chrift above most Kinds of Sinners upon Earth; while scarce any Thing can be more plain than this: that, if these Men be not the true Successors of the Pharifees in Hypocrify and spiritual Pride, it is impossible that there shou'd ever be any like them upon Earth; and confequently it was a vain Thing in our Saviour to leave fo many Cautions against such. But that there were to be many fuch falle Profeffors of his Name he knew full well, and has therefore left that infallible Mark to discover them by to the End of the World : Ye fall know them by their Fruits. So that we have not the least Occasion to spend our Time fruitlessly in arguing with fuch eternal Perverters of Truth: For leave them but to themselves, and we shall certainly see them as effectually to contradict their own Pretentions, as if the mest fubtil of them did it on Purpose, A flagrant Instance of which be pleased to hear from one of the many Blunders made by that gifted Prophet, who has the Honour of being esteemed by many, as the Author of that famous Sect now among us called Methodifts, and on the w arliest Ages of the Church to stigmatize Ca-

is

d

y

TS.

e

De

7-at

1:

ar h.

0-

as

er

W

ne

1:

ve

n-M

nt ne

oed

ect

1 he

a-

lic

tholic Christians by the Nick-name of Animal Men, boafting themselves to be the only Perfons that could merit the Encomium of Spiritual. In Conformity with whom this new Apostle will allow none, except such as are endow'd with his Spirit, to be real, but only mere nominal Christians; and accordingly he has dubbed all others as such, who have more Humility than to prefume to his high Pretenfions. In which, if it were not in Pity to his miserable Infatuation, it is pleasant to see how dexteroully he has discover'd his own Shame, if he had any left, in the Height of his Pharifaical Glorying over us; and how plainly he has made it appear, what Kind of Spirit that is, which he boafts fo much of being led by. For we are so far obliged to him, that he acknowledges us, notwithstanding our Destituteness of his Spirit, yet still to have such an awful Regard for the Saviour of the World (which we heretofore thought mere nominal Christians never had) as to be ashamed and grieved to hear the horrid Blasphemies of professed Deifts and Unbelievers, in always doing what lies in their Power to reprefent that divine Person; as nothing else but a vile Impostor, for doing the greatest Action of Kindness, that possibly cou'd be done to Mankind. This we know to be the only Way, these unhappy Persons have of endeavouring to hame, rally, and laugh us out of what Religion we have. Nor, according certain, according to our low Thoughts, can we account it to be any Thing less than a flat Contradiction, for a Man to pretend to have more real Kindness for the same Saviour of the World, than these Mockers of him themselves have; who for any End whatever can express a Desire to have them go on and prosper in thus venting their Spleen against him.

I appeal then to every Person, who is not lost to common Sense, to try whether he can possibly give a more favourable Interpretation to that affectionate Address of this same Prophet to his Friends the blaspheming Deifts; when he exhorts them with fuch feeming Satisfaction to carry on this their great Work, which he prophesies shall within a Century or two bring England to be fairly divided between them and fuch real Christians as himself; to the utter Extirpation of us forry nominal Christians from having the least Share in it. Go on, Gentlemen, fays he, and prosper, shame these nominal Christians out of that pure Superstition, which they call Christianity. Reason, rally, laugh them out of their dead, empty Forms, void of Spirit, of Faith, of Love. Here his familiar Imp feems to have owed this Wolf in Sheep's Cloathing a Diskindness, in thus spitefully obliging him to drop his Covering in the Height of his Triumphs over these despised nominal Christians. For let these be as bad, as he pleases to make them in other Respects; it is certain, eccording certain, if we may believe his own Words, that the pious Shame and Grief they conceive to hear Christ and his Religion thus shamelessly abused, either by this Man or those he here eggs on to it, are Virtues to which both of them are entire Strangers. If therefore we wou'd make him any way confiftent with himself, when we hear him declaring his Raptures in the happy Experience he has of the Fulness of Christ, and the Purity of his Love of Chrift, with many fuch like Expresfions; we must never imagine that he has all this while the least Regard to the Christ, who fuffered on Mount Calvary, and is mentioned in the Creed; but that his Mind runs upon quite another Person. And who that Person is, he has here also made a plain Discovery to us.

First, it is plain, that the Faith he here boasts of is not Christian Faith. For Christian Faith is founded upon the Holy Scripture. But so far is the Scripture from teaching it to be lawful to wish Men Prosperity in the Commission of Wickedness, under a Pretence of bringing about a supposed Good; that it expressly declares his Damnation to be just, who thinks it lawful to do (and consequently wish others to do) evil, that Good may come, [Rom. iii. 8.]

And fecondly, it is no less plain, that the Love, this counterfeit Saint here shews, is as opposite opposite to the Love of Christ as Darkness is to Light. For certainly Christ has sufficiently declared the Tenderness of his Love to Mankind upon all Occasions. But what fort of Love is this Man's, which can thus conceive a Pleasure, that others shou'd encrease their own Damnation (as we are sure such repeated Blasphemies must do) so it do but promote his own Design; which, by the Means he here takes to bring it about, is impossible to be good?

We have then no Reason to wonder at this Man's confummate Impudence, in bringing all Christians whatsoever by Head and Shoulders into the Number of his Party, who have ever been remarkable for their Piety; when we fee him thus free with Christ himself to make him condemn his own Religion. But to acquit these innocent Persons from the implous Guilt, which he has wickedly fixed upon them, let us for Argument's fake suppose in the primitive and purest Ages of the Church, that all the truly Orthodox, as he wou'd have us believe, were Men of his Spirit. If so, we know that in those Times the learned Heathens had both an equal Will and Capacity to blafpheme Christ with his present Friends the Deifts: But was it ever known or heard of. that any of those holy Persons made Use of fuch Methods to call in the Affistance of Heathens, those known Blasphemers of Christ, thus thus to shame, rally, and laugh the worst of Christian Heretics, into the Pale of the Church; as he here coakses from Insidels to bewitch us into his Church? Sure I am that both the Love of Christ, and of the Souls of their Brethren, were too pure in them ever to admit of any fuch base Helps.

see ester, fr.

us

If therefore this be the Spirit, Faith, and Love, which this Man scorns us so much for wanting, may God grant us for ever to want them; and rather continue stedsastly to embrace that Religion, which he spits his Venom so much against, under the Nick-names of pure Superstition, a System of dead empty Forms, or whatever else the Pride and Malice of his infernal Spirit can suggest to him.

From all which it is apparent what that Chrift, Light, and Spirit within is, which this Man is so zealous to bring his deluded Hearers to the Acknowledgment of. Nothing can be more certain than that divine Honour is what impure Spirits have been always ambitious of; a remarkable Instance of which we have, in the Attempt which the Devil once made upon the Son of God himfelf, [Matth. iii. 9.] And this it is always his unwearied Endeavour to get from Men by any means whatever. How careful then ought Men to be to avoid being brought under thefe specious Names to the actual Worship of the Devil, while they think they are performing the pureft est Service to God. For if this Man's Spirit within be the Object of that Worship, which his Followers are so much more zealous in paying in their beloved Assemblies, than in worshiping the true God with their Brethren, as Duty and Charity obliges them; then he who has not quite lost his Eyes must needs see, that the Devil as certainly carries a Share of their Worship in such Cases, as he did from the more knowing Heathens in their idolatrous Temples; who yet were as ignorant as these deluded Persons are that they worshipped any Thing else, but the true God himself.

But if any Person, out of Charity to the Man, be apt to suspect what he here says to be only some rash Slip, and not the Result of his more fettled Thoughts; I wou'd advise fuch a one to consider how this can be reconciled, not only with the infallible Inspiration he protends to, but with the Tendency of his whole Discourse in that Place. The whole Book, of which that is a Part, is recommended to the World with the utmost pretended Zeal for the Defence of what he afterwards hypocritically calls the Traditional Evidence of Christianity against Deists and Unbelievers. Which plainly appears to be with no other View than, Mountebank like, to use Christianity as his Fool for no other End but to gather a Crowd about his Stage, that himself or some for him, may have a fairer Opportunity to pick People's Pockets,

I SV Balfah

or at least to vend his Trash. For what else Means the vile Use he afterwards makes of the Evidence of Christianity, when he joins so heartily with the Deifts in making it appear as contemptible as he can, in order to make Way for his own Light (or rather Jack-a-Lanthorn) within?

e e is

i, a le of

ae

be ly

ity

ly

n-

for bis

ve

ts,

10

And yet notwithstanding all, to give us a Specimen of his matchless Impudence, he demurely fays, I do not undervalue traditional Evidence. Let it have its due Place and Honour. It is highly serviceable in its Kind, and in its Degree. And yet I cannot fet it on a Level with this (i. e. his Light within.) No, by no Means. It wou'd be a furprizing Thing indeed for a Man like him to do it fo great an Honour.

Shou'd I now go about to fhew what this Man means by what he calls the traditional Evidence of Christianity; it wou'd only be giving him an Advantage against me, in thus vainly fighting him, as was observed before, upon his own Ground. For were I in this or any other Case to prove ever so clearly that his Light within him is Darkness; he wou'd ftill keep up his Front in difdainfully smiling at my Ignorance. And whoever has the Af-Asrance to tax him with Hypocrify will be fure to find himself outlaced with more Affarance. Which we know to be always the Way of fuch like, who, as long as they think they have the least Screen to shelter themselves behind, will continually make it one of the greatest Wonders, that Men can be so unreasonable as to bring their Honesty in Question. All which, when we examine it a little more, may sufficiently convince us, that this precious Prophet has got indeed Assurance enough, not of his Holiness and Happiness, as he so often Pharisaically boasts, but of his matchless Impudence and Wickedness, in thus even barefacedly shewing his Contempt of Christ and his Religion, under Pretence of the greatest Kindness to both.

But yet, to pass by this Man's Assurance, which I acknowledge my Inability in any Case to cope with: I will venture to give a Specimen or two of it, that you may perceive how much he boasts the Religion of his Christ within to surmount the Religion of our crucified Saviour.

Our Lord then himself has taught us, Blefsed are they that have not seen, and yet have besieved [John xx. 29.] Agreeable to which St, Paul says, We are saved by Hope: But Hope that is seen is not Hope; &c. [Rom. viii. 24.] And according to the same Apostle we Christians have always thought, that in this Life Men were never to have Faculties given them suited to view Things invisible and eternal, in any Case whatever; but that in this Life they were always to steer their Course by the Eyes of Faith only; which we have hitherto judged lliw

was

R

le II

e, i-

1,

(a

1-

n

A

t-

e,

y

ris

of feit.

be .]

ffe

m in

y es d

as

was the Apostle's Meaning, when he says, We now fee through a Glass darkly (i. e. by Reflexion, which is the only Vision we can have by a Glass); but then (lays he) Face to Face, (i.e. directly without Reflexion.) See I Con. xiii. 12. which same Meaning we think also he has, when he fays, [2 Cor. v. 7.] For we walk by Faith, and not by Sight. Agreeable to which again we presume St. John has the same Meaning, when he fays [1 John iii. 2.] Beloved, it does not yet appear what we shall be. But so much is the Faith of this Man, above what our Christ has ever allowed us to hope for, that if we may believe him, it shows them Things invisible and eternal in the clearest Light, with the fullest Certainty and Evidence. For (fays he) it leaves not us to receive our Notices of them by mere Reflexion from the dull Glass of Sense: but resolves a Thousand Enigmas of the highest Concern by giving Faculties fuitable to Things invisible. Here perhaps the Terms Sense and Faculties are Holes through which this Blasphemer of the Scriptures will endeavour to creep out; and when he is taxed with contradicting the Word of God, he will flee to his usual Resort of giving his own Words what Meaning he pleases. This it seems is a Privilege peculiar to Men endowed with this Light within, that they can always use and turn Words into what Sense they think convenient. And we must always take it as a Rule Rule with them, that the holy Scriptures are not to be supposed to be a Guide to their Light within, but their Light is the fole Guide by which Men are to interpret them. For the Scriptures at heft ate but a dead Letter, whereas their Light is a continual living Infpiration; and sho' God may feem to contradict himfelf in the formet, yet he can hever do it in the latter. So that it feems we have hitherto been fo far mistaken in thinking Faith like Hope [Rom. viii. 24, 25.] to be different from fuch actual Enjoyment; that no Man can be faid to have true Faith, who has not one Time or other had as perfect a Sight of invisible Things; as St. Stepbert just before his Martyrdom [Acts vii 55 or Se Paul when he was wrapt up into the third Heaven [2 Coraxii. 2-4.] Privileges, which we imagin'd had very rarely been granted, but to the best of Men, and to their only upon extraordinary Occasions,

We have also it seems been all along so ignorant at not to have had the least true Knowledge of Scripture, i. r. of the metaphorical and signative Parts of it; which can only be discerned by such spiritual Persons as those, who seldom use any Parts else. And particularly our Ignorance is in nothing more plain than in that low Interpretation we put upon such Passages as these of St. Paul, [Phil. ix. 13.] I can do all Things through Christ which strengthnets me, which we presume could never ver be meant of all Things any otherwise than of Things which Christ required, and thus enabled him to perform. And this Performance in the best of Men we think to be very imperfeet, according to that plain Text of St. Fames [Chap. iii. 2.] where he fays, In many Things we offend all. But by this Man's Faith of what he has the utmost Certainty in (a Contradiction in Terms) or more properly, by his pretended Light within, he boafts that every one of his Christians is peculiarly and inexpresfibly bappy in the bigbeft and fullest Conviction. In which high Sense he fays, that his Love is productive of all right Affections, and of all right Astions, It carries bim to an uniform Practice of Yustice and Mercy, equally extensive with the Principle whence it flows. It constrains him to do all possible Good of every possible Kind to all Men: it makes bim invariable resolved in every Circumstance of Life. He knows how to use all Things in their proper Place, and yet is superior to them in all. In thort, if we can believe him, he is as absolutely perfect as ever Christ himself was. But then he is above Christ in this, that Christ thought fit to convince Men of his divine Abilities by Miracles, [fabr v. 31-36.] while this Man expects all bound to acknowledge the Divinity of his Light within, upon his own bate Word. Much more is he above St. Peter and St. Paul, who according to him cou'd be toresiden no feal Christians [Gal. ii. 11, 12. and 2 Cor. xii. 7.] after each had actually received the Holy Ghost [Acts ii. 1—8. Acts ix. 15—18.] and done much more to prove themselves real Christians, than (I believe) ever he will do for the Proof of his pretended Light within.

Whence, let it be observed that, according to this Man's Principles, no Man can be faid to have Christian Faith, who is not actually so crackt in his Head, as to perfuade himfelf falfely, that he has all those high Perfections he here speaks of, within him. For if he be so perfectly certain of having them, as has been already faid, it is no longer Faith but Fruition : and he is already in Possession of what every good Christian here is only to hope for hereafter. Confequently, no Man can be one of his real Christians, who does not really some Way labour under the same Disorder, which Festus supposed to have seized this Man's Antagonist St. Paul. And how far he confesses this will be feen by and by. From whence we have a very fine Prospect of the Faith he prides himfelf fo much in preaching up, in Scorn of all then he is above Care in this others.

And here I cannot forbear taking Notice again of the Privilege this Man's Spirit gives him in his arbitrary Interpretation, not only of the Words of Scripture, but of his own Words, which are both equally a Nose of Wax to him, whenever he is put to a Pinch. Thus in his foregoing

S I I

3

£

3

e

$

y

i

it

H

15

f

11 a

11 æ

es

of

S;

n, iis

ng

foregoing Blasphemies, I think no reasonable Man can suppose him to mean any less by them, than that he who is once possessed of his Spirit is fet quite above the Reach of Sin. Agreeable to which in another Performance intitled, An earnest Appeal to Men of Reason and Religion, he feems with his accustomed Affurance to front the whole World, in the Behalf of himself and his Followers, with that Challenge of our Saviour [John viii. 46.] Which of you convinceth us of Sin? What he means by Sin is hard for any Person to know; nor is it worth the while to feek after. For let that be how it will, notwithstanding all his fanctified Pretentions, he has given the plaineft Demonstration that he has got his Share of it, as well as his Brother Labourer at Shrewfoury: nor is there Room for any one to doubt, but that both were richly endowed with the fame Spirit. And I suppose it to be some such Discoveries as these, that has made him fo flily turn his Tale in the same Performance, when he joins with us nominal Christians in affirming (Page 26.) that Christian Perfection does not imply an Exemption from Ignorance, or Infirmities, or Temptations. But can any one think it to be the fame Person, who was Author of the Letter to Dr. Middleton, wherein he allows no Man to be a real Christian but one of the following Character, which if we will believe him, is the infallible Consequence of being endowed with his Spirit? For fuch a one he roundly affirms to be always free from the painful Swellings of Pride, from the Flames of Anger, from the impetuous Gusts of irregular Self-will. He is no longer tortured with Envy or Malice, or with unreasonable or burtful Defire. He is no more enslaved to the Pleasures of Sense, but has the full Power both over his Mind and Body, in a continued, cheerful Courfe of Sobriety, of Temperance and Chastity. He knows bow to use all Things in their proper Place, and yet is superior to them all .- He stands steady and collected in bimself-in Honour or Shame, in Abundance or Want, in Ease or in Pain, in Life or in Death, always and in all Things he has learned to be content, to be easy, thankful, joyful, bappy. One wou'd think Contradictions can hardly be more strongly expressed than in these two Passages. Yet that the same Person is Author of both, himself has taken Care to let People know, in the great Ambition he has shewn in the News-Papers not to be robbed of the Honour of this his accomplished Letter; which from Page 106 may deservedly be received, as the Alcoran of the Methodists; as it pretends to give us there a short System of their Religion, in Opposition to what he scornfully calls nominal Christianity. But that ever Mortal shou'd be so prophane, as to imagine one of these gifted Persons, capable thus to contradict himself! this, they will will gravely tell you, can be resolved into nothing else, but the Blindness of Men's Hearts, who have not their Senses sufficiently exercised to discern spiritual Things. Thus are Men always to be bantered out of their Senses. And it wou'd make even a Statue shew its Indignation, if it cou'd hear with what harden'd Impudence, this Man frequently appeals to Reason, for what, if he had his right Wits, himself cou'd not but know to be contrary to all common Sense. But it seems let any of these counterfeit Saints say what he will, be it ever so absurd, ever so impious; all the Fault must still lie upon Men's Incapacity to understand him.

es

of is

fe

le e,

7-

n

11 ŷ,

k

K-

at

lf

ie

1-

is 6

of

re

n

1-

But the most accomplished Artifice this Spirit has taught his Emissaries, to gain Proselytes by, comes still behind. By which it must be confessed, if we will not allow his Church to pass for bob; yet we are forced to grant it in his own Way to be catholic. And that is by making it perfectly reconcileable to Perfons of all Opinions. By which Fetch again this old experienced Sophister has taught these devout Worshippers of him to make it so far boly, that right or wrong they can lay claim to all Persons of all Denominations whatever, who have ever been reputed for Holiness, from the Beginning of the World till the End. of it, as Members of their Church. But then, methinks, it wou'd be but fair, to take along plate, with them too all the remaining Part of the World, how infamous foever they either have been or shall be for their Villany, with the Devil himself at the Head of them. For I believe few can doubt whether most of these will not effectually acquit themselves of Blame, if it be put to their own Opinion. But left any one shou'd think I am too severe upon the Members of this Church, be pleased to take another Tafte of the impious Cant of this Prophet, who always makes Men's inward Affurance of having his Spirit to be the whole Sum and Substance of Religion, and the infallible Mark by which they may be affured of their Acceptance with God. For if a Man have but this, Forgive (fays he) bis Particularities of Opinion, and (what you think) superstitious Modes of Worship. These are Circumstances but of Small Concern; and don't enter into the Essence of his Character. Cover them with a Veil of Love, and look at the Substance; bis Tempers, bis Holiness, bis Happiness. Can calm Reason conceive either a more amiable or a more descreable Character. Is it (this Character) his own? Away with Names ! Away with Opinions! I care not what you are called. I afk not (it does not de-Jerve a Thought) what Opinion you are of s fo you are conscious to your felf, that you are the Man, whom I have been (however faintly) describing. And to make his Meaning still more plain,

o o Lie

A

n,

9

of 6

10

d

or se.

id

74

at.

is

r.

th

ot

e-

fo

le-

re

p,

plain, if possible concerning the Contempe he has for all the Externals of Christianity he again expresly declares that Men may effective ally have this internal or rather infernal Affin rance, and hold Opinions, tobich cannot be de fended. Here the Angel of Darkness has made his incarnate Appearance as wifible as possible in the Perfor of this unhappy Man. Por what elfe but a Devil incarnate can have the Impudence to face down the World as he does, that he is not only a fincere Christian, but one of the most faithful Sons also of the Church of England; while he is here openly professing a Religion, if it may be lawful to call it fuch, which is as opposite to Christias nity as Hell is to Heaven? But what will not fuch industrious Agents of Satan do to carry forward their Mafter's Work; who can make so diabolical a Perversion of St. Paul's Words in thus being made all Things to all Men, that by all Means they may deftroy all of them to be I lings quite infignitamol

We will humour him to far, as to confine, what he here shews his Contempt so much of under the Titles of Superstitious Modes, Names, and Opinions, only to what belongs to Christianity. The no Question needs be made, whether one of his Stamp cannot upon occasion make his Christ within equally applicable to few, Turk, or Gentile. For these can all join with him in protessing only one supreme

God, and have no other Difference from one another, in Religious Matters, but in their different Opinions about him. But, to confine ourselves only to such Persons as pretend to Christianity. Don't we know several of these to join so far with him in his Spiritual Worship, as not only to deny that Christ ever consecrated a Succession of Men to be the sole Dispensers of the Sacraments he instituted; but also to put an equal Slight upon the Use of such instituted Means of Grace at all? In which yet I think that Sect of Pretenders to the Spirit to be far more consistent with themselves than others, who reject the former and hold to the latter.

But let Men's Opinions about these Things be what they will, all are alike to him, even tho' they cannot be defended. It will be hard to conceive what this Chameleon can suppose shou'd make any Opinion incapable of being defended, when at the fame Time he thus holds all of them to be Things quite infignificant. But Nonfense is the smallest of his Failings. Nor can any one tell well what he means by Opinions. However, I will for once make bold to confine his Meaning of the Word Opinion to Men's Thoughts only concerning the external Modes of Christian Worship. Since then all Pretenders to Christianity are either first, such as hold the religious Modes of Baptism, and the Eucharist to be Things facred; God.

20-10

r E

5 rs

h

7:

5

zs

n

d

(e g

t.

S.

by

ke

rd

ng

p.

ire

les

igs

d;

facred; or fecondly, such as account the fame to be nothing else but mere Superstitions; it follows, according to him, that both Men's Opinions about these are Things of no manner of Consequence; for if he had thought otherwise, he must have made his Exceptions. And thus we have the Holy Sacraments of Baptism and the tremendous Body and Blood of Christ depreciated as no other than Superstitious Modes of Worship, Circumstances but of small Concern, Things which deserve not a This is the Language he uses to in-Thought. gratiate himself with a Quaker or Muggletonian; while to an ignorant Church of England Man, as he has here order'd it, he can screen himself under the Word Superstitious, and demurely tell him; Alas, I here mean only fuch Modes of Worship as are purely Superstitious: How then can it be imagined, that I, who am so diligent in administring the Sacraments my felf, shou'd esteem those such?

And is this, do you think, a fit Person to be admitted into those Holy Orders, which he so much despises; or that he shou'd have the least to do either with the Administration or Partaking of those Sacraments, which, it is plain, he only uses as a Cloak to his Knavery? Whenever then this pretended Reformer makes the Faults he spies in the Church of England to be the Subject of his Insults over us, (which we know are always to him the most delicious Food;) can any one conclude, but that we richly deferve it; for still retaining such Vipers in her Bosom? And I presume the present Church can bardly be taxed with a more wretched Neglect; than for tamely suffering the Table of the Lord to be so frequently polluted with the Company of these unparalleled Garbolics; which by all true Christians can be judged as nothing less than the propharent Prostitution of the blessed Body and Blood of Christ to the worst of Purposes. For what can be worse, than thus to turn the most savered Mysterics of holy Religion to serve only for a Cover to the most hellish Hypocrist?

But again to descend lower than the immediate Inflitutions of Christ himself, shou'd we only take Notice of those which his Apostles establifted for the standing Form of the Government and Discipline of the Church: Certainly no Person can be accounted a Christian who uses these themselves with this Man's Contempt. It was for this Purpose, we know, that Christ promised to the Apostles the Holy Ghost to guide shem into all Truth. [John xvi. 13.] Confequently, whatever these holy Persons unanimoully ordained for these Ends was to be for ever unalterable by the highest Authority of Man; unless we can imploufly suppose that Christ left his Church so imperfect at the Beginning, as afterwards to stand in Need of human Amendment. Whereas nothing can be

Gur

ons be more certain, than that this original Platform was under Christ the Head designed to be the Center of all external Unity of Religion among Men; at all Times, and in all Places, from the Beginning of the World to the End.

And Men were commanded to shew no less awful Regard to these, than to any other Command of Christ.

ers

ent

ore

ng tly

al

ans

an-

hat fa-

nly

ate

nly ta-

rn-

nly

ho

pt.

flir

to

n-

ni-

for

of 3e-

of an be

What high Account the Apostles themselves made of these Circumstances of Religion, which this Man reckons not to deferve a Thought, may be feen by any one, who attentively reads the fifteenth Chapter of their Acts, together with the eleventh Chapter of St. Paul's first Epistle to the Corintbians. So great a Stranger was that particular Apostle to this Man's universal complying Spirit in such Matters, that when certain Judaizing Teachers endeavour'd to bring back the Galatians to the Observances of the Mosaic Law, he wou'd not give Place by Subjection, no not for an Hour; that the Truth of the Gofpel might continue : [Gal. ii. 5.] and he exhorts the Thef-Salonians to follow the like Example in standing fast, and holding the Traditions they had been taught, whether by Word or Epiftle; at the same Time commanding them in the Name of the Lord Jesus, to withdraw themfelves from every Brother that walked contrary to the same [2 Thess. ii. 15. and iii. 6.] According to which again St. John makes it to be the certain Mark by which the Spirit of Truth is to be distinguished from the Spirit of Errar, that be that knoweth God beareth (i.e. obesetb) us; but he that is not of God heareth (i. e. obeyeth) not us, [1 John iv. 6.]

And certainly, these first Founders of the Church were not fo first in thus sequiping the perpetual Obedience of Mankind to all their unanimous Injunctions of this Kind, but for the weightiest Cause. Which appears in the three following Respects

First. It was absolutely necessary to vindicate the Honour of Christ, that his Church shou'd never be necessitated to put on different Faces in different Ages or Places. Christianity is and can be but one and the fame, like its first Author himself, who is the same, Yesterday, and to Day, and for ever, [Heb. xiii. 8.] When Men speak of the Unity of the Church, no more is often understood, than that it ought always to be under the fame Authority in all Places at the same Time. But certainly this is a Couseption quite too parrow to be applied to the Catholic Church of Christ, which not only takes in all the Members of it at one Time, but at all Times ; from the Time of its first Formation to the End of the World, [Matth. xxviii. 29. The Promise, says St. Peter, is to you and to your Children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lard our God Shall call, [Acts ii. 391. And were to be trained up in Nothing elfe,

10

. 4.

eth

the

ing

all

but in el w

ate

u'd

CCS

und

Lu-

40 len

is

to

at

-100

he

aly

THE

a÷

iii.

nd ii.

ng fe, effe, as to Matters of Religion, but the fame Belief and Practice; which was univertally taught by Christ and his Apostles, with their immediate Successors: fo that all might make up but one Body united by one Spirit, eatled in one Hope, owning one Lord, one Faith, one Baytism, [Epb. iv. 4, 5.] Confequently, every Thing different from the primitive Model, which has at any Time or Place been impofed upon Christians under a Shew of Religion. is to be effectment as no Part of Christianity it felf; but the mere Invention of Men. whatever was thus jointly established by the original Founders of the Catholic Church (who, we know, were in all Respects sufficiently qualifted for that great Work) must for that Reafon be perfectly agreeable to the Will of God. and can have nothing more fitly adapted to For any Power thereanswer the same End. fore upon Earth to presume afterwards to add to, or diminish from, much more entirely to change, any of these primitive Injunctions, is blasphemously to suppose that God himself was ignorant what might hereafter be most fuitable and advantageous to the State of his Church. Or if the Necessity of such an Alteration in any Respect be attributed to the Short-fightedness of the Apostles; what an indelible Reproach wou'd this be upon Christianity? For where the Foundation is weak, the Superstructure cannot be strong; and if the E 2 Fountain Fountain itself be tainted, it can hardly be expected, that the Stream coming from it shou'd Again, what a Dishonour must it be to the Son of God, to have it thought that his Religion, which was to keep Mankind together to himself in the most perfect Unity and Agreement with one another, shou'd itself be the Cause of the greatest Confusion and Discord among them? And yet this Dishonour we see brought upon him by the many lamentable Differences among Christians at this Day in Matters of Religion. All which had been entirely prevented, if Men had been as faithful, as they ought to have been, in their Obedience to these primitive Traditions. For as soon as ever Men came afterwards fo far to forget themselves and their Duty, as to new model these according to their own Dreams and Phansies, or rather to serve their own finister Aims; the Barriers were then broke down, by which Christ had enclosed his Vineyard, and a Gap was open'd for all those endless Divisions and Innovations, which have happen'd ever fince; and which the Spirit, or rather God, of this unhappy Man with a malicious Pleasure be-The first Breach made Way for a second, and that fecond again for a third, till at Length that once pleasant Spot lay wholly exposed to every Destroyer. Nor can we reasonably expect how it shou'd be otherwise. For when they came once so far to presume upon the Siemmo I

t

C

t

the joint Authority of those holy Persons, who cou'd so sensibly prove their Commission from God; how hardly cou'd it be expected, that more Obedience shou'd be shewn to any of their Successors afterwards? When therefore we look upon these Apostolical Institutions only as they are in themselves, it appears that they were Things of fo exceedingly tender a Nature, as not to endure the least blowing upon without being tarnished, nor the smallest Alteration without being effectually spoiled. But if we cannot be wrought up to a due Awe and Veneration for these Things out of a Sense of the Obligation we lie under to maintain the Honour of Christ and his holy Religion; let us then confider how much we are concern'd in it ourselves. For,

e ıs

e

6,

10

h

d

is

eat

X-

n-

or

on

he

Secondly, we know of no Way, ordinarily speaking, of gaining Acceptance with God; but as we are Members of his visible Church upon Earth. But how can he be accounted a Member of that Church, who scornfully despises the sacred Injunctions of the Apostles themselves: those Foundation Stones united with Christ, upon which the whole stands? [Eph. ii. 20.] How such a one is to be accounted, even in ordinary Matters, Christ himself has told us, [Matth. xviii. 17.] What then can be thought of so notorious an Impugner as this? It is by our sincere Obedience to those holy Persons, that we are to expect all our our spiritual Nourithment from Christ the vine Vint. In which if a Man abide not, be is east forth as a Branch, and is withered John xv. 6.] Such is the Malignity of not thus bolding the Head, from which all the Body by Joints and Bands baving Nourishmens ministred and but regether, encreased with the Encrease of God, fall, in ro. | Shou'd no other ill Confequence follow this to the Church, than what natural by forings from Differion to Society in general, itself is enough to make us for ever lament fo great a Michief But when we confider, that this is not only a Man's wilful Separation of himself from the Church of Christ, bet from Christ himself, from all those heavenly Graces and Influences, which redound upon all fuch as continue faithful Members of this mystical Body no Words can be sufficient to express the Greatness of the Loss to the Man hanfelf, how much foever he despites it. But, Thirdly, This Contempt of the Authority of the Apostles and first Founders of Christianity (in the Externals of Religion, were it to go no further) is not only a Contempt of Christ, and what is of most Consequence to the Man himfelf, but it is also an Affront against even common Sense, and much more against the Knowledge peculiar to a Christian. Man, we know, is a Being compounded of Body and Spirit, and for that Reason is equally obliged to glorify God in his Body as well as Spirit [Rom.

Y.

ot

by

W

23

to xii.

[34,] xiin Islan Cori vi. ap. d por can we other wife give the least fensible Evidence (which is all the Evidence we naturally reacive from one another) that we are Members of Christ's Body. So that the Church could not otherwife Sublist as a Society of Men, than by those external Ties, established by its first Founders as the only known Marks of the Unity of its Members with one another, and all of them with Christ. For this Reason it was, that the Apostles presumed not to impose the least Thing upon Christians, as a Duty of Religion, but only as they actually received it from Christ himselfs nor did they require Obedience to their Commands upon any other Account than as it was a necessary Manifestation of Men's unfeigned Obedience to him, [Rom xiv. 28. 2 Can il 24. that is, as it was the real Effect of Men's Love and Effect for him, Submiffion and Gratitude to him, Trust and Confidence in him. Which is nothing elfe but the Obediente of that Faith [Rom. zvi. 26.] without pubich it is impossible to please God Heb. x1.6.] The Faith, which Christ requires, is only fuch a Faith as worketh by Love [2 Core You 4. Gal v. 6.] and we can judge no otherwise of the Sincerity of that Love, than by the Sincerity of our Obedience to these, as well as his other Commandments, Tohn xiv. 23. a Fobre w. 3.] But how can they be faid to have any just Love or Esteem for Christ forward or his Father, who can put such a Slight upon those very Persons, to whom Christ himself said, He that heareth you, heareth me: and he that despiseth you, despiseth me: and he that despiseth me, despiseth him that sent me? [Luke x. 16.]

Thus you have feen of what high Concern a close Adherence to the Modes and Circumstances of Christian Worship is, not only to the Church of God in general, but to every Christian in particular. But how can it be imagined that this Man has the least Concern for the most facred of those; when he so barefacedly despites all in general, without condescending to mention one in particular Away with all fuch worthless Superstition from the pure Religion of this precious Saint; which confifts only in this unum Necessarium. that a Man be affured in himself of his own Holiness and Happiness. Let him always have but Affurance enough and he is fafe enough. So that with him the whole of a Man's Religion is to have the highest Conceit of himself, to trust in and obey no other but himself. After which it is only giving this accomplished Assurance the Name of Christ within him, and calling that Spirit, which is the Author of it, sometimes God, and fometimes the Holy Ghoft; and immediately no Man can become a purer Lover, or a more devout Adorer of Christ and the blessed Trinity, than he; who by such means is henceforward I ti

B

D

tu

In

fe

th

bo

ev

forward thoroughly furnished to set up for a gifted Brother, and may whenever he pleases pray in the Language of a Saint to Beelzebub himfelf.

Here you have the whole Scheme of this Man's Religion; which with his accustomed Affurance he calls the System of Christianity, allowing nothing elfe to have the least Right to the Name: as doubtless nothing else has in his Sense of the Word. But the greatest Difficulty he finds is in bringing the Scriptures to his Side. For the Attainment of which he has no other Way, but to fly to his common Recourse in assuming an Authority by Virtue of his Light within to turn and wiredraw them to what Sense he pleases. We are apt to imagine that the Character he gives his real Christian can never be found in Scripture applied to any mere Mortal upon Earth. But we are much mittaken in one of his Abilities to entertain the least Doubt, that he cannot only find that for us, but express Scripture-Promises of it too. And were it not in Indignation to hear the Words of God himfelf fo miserably abused and blasphemed, by the Ways and Means he uses to bring this about; it is pleasant to observe his frequent Blunders and Inconfistencies, by which he every now and then again discovers the cloven Foot of his Spirit.

Hew

210

2

AS FILL

Christianity, he fays, describes this Character in all its Parts, - in many Passages of the old Testament. But where they are he has left us to feek. It is no Matter, he favs for therefore it is only Want of Faith, which can make Men not believe that it is fo. But vet, I suppose, he himself thought these Pasfages imperfect, which made him go on as follows. Thefe are filled up in the new I fup. pole again he means the new Testament] retouched and finished with all the Art of God. Here, not to take Notice of the uncommon Delicacy, which runs through all the Parts of this Flourish of Rhetoric, I shall only fix upon the three last Words of it, Art of God's which must certainly be acknowledged to be a Master-piece of his Bloquence. But how to reconcile it with the great God of Heaven and Earth, whom I suppose he there means; this I must confess to be quite beyond my Skill without bringing it upon the nearest Borders to Blasphemy. I have often heard of the Wildom and Knowledge of God, but never bes fore of the Art of God. One would have thought he might have carried on his foolids Metaphor, in comparing the Almighty thus to a Painter or Artificer, full as well by faying retouched and finished by God bimself But who except a Man of his Tafte, wou'd ever prefume to apply either Art or Cunning to the Being of all Perfection? It will indeed agree perfectly wall, well, when applied to the black God, whom he (I hope unwittingly) worships. For we are not ignorant of his Arts and Devices [2 Cor. ii. 11.] One, not the least considerable of which, is to train up Disciples thus to retouch and simile the Scriptures. A Cheat, which he attempted to put upon the Son of God himself; and therefore it is less to be wonder'd at, that he is so industrious to put the same upon us [Matth. iv. 6.]

5

h

2

S

i

nf

His first Attempt to fetch the Character, he gives his pretended real Christian, from Scripture, is upon our Saviour's Sermon on the Mount, and upon the thirteenth Chapter of St. Paul's first Epistle to the Corintbians. But I prefume the most zealous Methodist of this Man's Cast cannot reasonably tax us with doing Injustice to this real Christian, if we draw his Character from the Practice of their Prophet himself, rather than from the Scripture. Surely it will not be denied but that he himself must be a real Christian; and it is much less reasonable to expect this Character from Scripture, which at best is but a dead Letter, than from the living Oracle himself by which only the Scripture is to be interpreted? And if fo, then let us look back again upon his before remarkable Behaviour, and fee how well it agrees with what out Lord himfelf has faid in that Sermon. Particularly, while you are making this Comparison, fix your Eye upon diew Matth.

wi

W

W

YO

pr Cl

m ju

be

WH

no

ip th

n

to

W

tu

fc

0

Matth. v. 3, 4, 5, 8, 9, 19, 20. vi. 1—7, 16—18, 22, 23. vii. 1—5, 15—23. Again in the abovemention'd Chapter of St. Paul, look how contrary this Man's Charity is to the Charity there described in the 4th and 6th Verses. And had he any Shame in him, as has before been observed, he cou'd never have the Front to apply those Words of the Apostle Verse the 12th, to the Character of his Christian, which he has been shewn before so manifestly to contradict in that very Character.

But still with a Face barder than a Rock, [Fer. v. 3.] he perfifts that both the Old Teftament and New promise this Character to be his, who will not rest till he attains it. What he means by the Man's not resting till be attains it, is what he has never told us: But by what comes afterwards we may perhaps be able to make some Guess at it. In the mean Time let us hear how ingeniously he makes these Promises out. Why, the new Testament he fays, is in Effect all a Promise. If you ask how he makes that appear, he gives this invincible Reason, seeing every Description of the Servants of God mentioned therein, has the Nature of a Command; in Confequence of thefe general Injunctions [1 Cor. xi. 1. Heb. vi. 12.] And every Command bas the Force of a Promife; in Virtue of these general Promises, Exek. xxxvi. 26, 27. Heb. viii. 10. Accordingly when it is faid, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with with all thy Heart, and with all thy Soul, and with all thy Mind [Mat. xxii. 37.] it is not only a Direction, what I shall do; but a Promise of what God will do in me: exactly equivalent with what is written elsewhere, Deut. xxx. 6. Here you have all the Man has to fay to prove the Promise of the Character (or rather, the pretended divine Accomplishments) of his Christian from Scripture. In which any one may fee his fallacious Quibbling, to make what he pleases pass for a Promise: And all just about as much to his Purpose, as if it had been fetched from Lilly's Grammar. He may, if he will, refer that Promise in Ezekiel to what he quotes from the eighth Chapter to the Hebrews. All which, we know, amounts to no more than what was fulfilled by the more spiritual Commands given under the Gospel, than what had formerly been enjoined by the Mosaic Law. And if we consult any honest Commentator upon these Passages, we shall not find the least Advantage given from them to this Man's Cause; except it be from those Modes of Speech, which his black Spirit always uses as a Handle to make the Holy Scriptures appear nothing else, but a senseless Rhapfody of Contradictions.

Next, he proceeds to tell us how this Promise of his own making is to be attained; which he now says is by what he calls Faith: a Part of which we have already heard. Before, he is f

fe]

i,

it

h

faid,

faid. It was to be had by a Man's not refting till be have it. Very infructive truly! But now, when he comes to shew us what he means by extraordinary Expression, we meet with a much more extraordinary Explanation; which is this, that a Man is to be entirely at reft, and do nothing at all of himfelf, till he has it. I challenge any Person in the World to make any Thing elfe, with respect to the Work a Man does of himself to attain it, of all that blasphemous Jargon he uses in the Description he afterwards gives of his Faith: which, befide the former pretended supernatural Power wrought in the Soul of feeing Things invisible and eternal, resolves the Whole again into nothing at all but the boafted inward Assurance of his own Holiness and Happiness. I call it blafphemous, because he not only basely belies Christianity, in affirming it to make fuch a Representation of Faith; but also so often brings in the facred Names of God and his Son, to carry on his most impious Abuse of both. And thus we have a full Prospect of what all this Man's Religion centers in which he fometimes calls Faith, fometimes the Light shining in the Heart, sometimes the internal Evidence of Christianity; just as his familiar Spirit puts it into his Head. 1234

Yet this is the Man that infults and abuses all other Christians, as follows. May I, says he, without Offence, aft of you that are called bist-

Christians;

bo

H

ce

ho

200 of i

CHI

Aip

ma

he

con

Cor

mig

had

his

Christians; What Loss would you sustain, in giving up your present Opinion [i. e. in giving up your Senfes, by acknowledging that the fi. e. bis Christian System is of God? Though you bear the Name, you are not Christians now: you have neither Christian Faith nor Love: you bave no divine Evidence of Things unfeen ! you bave not yet enter'd into the Holieft by the Blood of Jefus. You are neither happy nor holy. You are not boly in Heart, Superior to Pride, to Anger, to foolish Depres. Neither are you body in Life. Observe another Blunder of this Hypocrite; let any one try how he can conceive a Man to be boly in Life, and yet anholy in Heart." But to proceed, Ton do not walk as Christ alfo woulked. Does not the math of your Christianity lie in your Opinion, decked with a few outward Observances? Here again you not only fee what light Account he makes of all outward Observances; but have another Tafte also of his wonderful Sagacity, who can conceive a Man to be of a Religion without entertaining any Opinion at all about it. I Appole this again is one of the thouland Enigmus about Things in visible and eternal, which he fays his Faith refolves to him! That is, all confilts of nothing else but a reconciling of Contradictions Of which, no Doubt a Man might be enabled to pick out a Thousand, who had the Opportunity of hearing but a few of his spiritual Discourses. But to conclude this unsilliani. Triumph

n

d

5.

y

e

-

d

fe

a

1, es

be

ìs

es

gis ed

5;

ŧ

t

t

V

t

10 h

t

S

1 u

d f

Triumph of his over us poor nominal Christians, for as to Morality, even bonest Heathen Morality (O let me utter a melancholy Truth) many of those whom you stile Deists, there is reason to fear have more of it than you. After which follows his impious Parænesis to his Friends the Deists, as was before remarked, in helping him to shame, rally, and laugh such as he calls nominal Christians into their own two Churches. From all which again it is evident, that all his pretended Zeal, before shew'd against Dr. Middleton, was ultimately intended against Christianity.

Deism and this Man's Methodism appear therefore at present to be the two grand Devices, by which the Enemy of Mankind levels his Force against Christianity. Christianity, he knows full well, is the only Armour of Defense, by which Men can be enabled to bear up against his Attacks; and consequently it is no wonder for him to endeavour, either to rob us of that, or make it be of no Service to us. To which Purpose he applies these two Instruments, as follows. The former wou'd make us believe that the Devil is nothing but an empty Name, or mere Bugbear, contrived on Purpose to terrify Children and Fools: the latter advances the fame wicked Spirit into the Place of God himself, making his diabolical Illufions and Suggestions pass for the Operations of the Holy Ghost. The former wou'd make Christianity gambin i Christianity appear to be nothing but a cunning Defign: and on the quite contrary the latter transforms it at best into nothing but downright Madness. Thus we see how artfully the Tempter blows hot and cold with the fame Breath, and makes Contrarieties equally subfervient, to his Purpose. So that while these two Agents like Samfon's Foxes look quite opposite Ways, yet both are of the same Use, to carry forward their Master's Aim; which, were it in his Power, is to burn up Christianity out of the World, that he might be no longer troubled with a Thing fo contrary to his Defigns. But yet of these two Agents I think the former is preferable to the latter in this, that he acts more openly and in Sight; while the latter more like Satan himfelf, works always under Ground, and endeavours to turn our own Weapons unawares upon ourselves, under the false Disguise of a Friend.

is I,

hnise

y

11 ls

y,

of

ar

is

b

s.

re pr-

er

1-ns

(c ty

Ishall only give you one Taste more of this Man's pretended Pity for our Ignorance out of this Alcoran of his; which I rather chase to do, as it seems to be a Master-piece of his Eloquence and Hypocrisy. Where he breaths forth the Longings of his Soul for that happy Time, when all Men, as he prophesies, shall be brought to his Religion. O, says he, that the Time were come! How do I long for you to be Partakers of the exceeding great and precious G.

i f

b

h

to

li

h

F

1

n

O

b

P

n

0

a

h

to

C

Promise! How am I pained [So that you see this perfectly happy Man is yet subject to conceive Pain at an Affront] when I bear any of you using these filly Terms, which the Men of Form have taught you, calling the Mention of the only Thing they want [to make them compleat Villains | Cant! the deepest Wisdom, the highest Happiness, Enthusiasm! What Ignorance is this! How extremely despicable wou'd it make you in the Eyes of any [i.e. of any, who posfibly can have no Eyes at all to fee into it: mark the admirable Sense but a Christian [i.e. bis Christian.] But he [good Man] cannot defpife you [tho' at the same Time he reckons you as much below him as the vilest Animal, who loves you as his own Soul, who is ready to lay down his Life for your Sake. Do you think his Love for us can be fo great, as he here pretends, who has thewn so little Love for his Saviour, as earnestly to exhort the Deists to worry us with their usual Blasphemies of that holy Name? All the Belief, he can have from me in this, is to believe he can fay any Thing. And this I think he has given the utmost Demonstration of to any one, who will be at the Pains of reading the before-mention'd latter Part of his accomplished Letter: which from the Beginning to the End I affirm to confift of nothing elfe, but one continued Chain of Hypocrify and Lies; bating two Passages. The former is, when he affures his Reader of having ing the boasted Gift of his Spirit within him: which I dare say will be readily allowed by every one, that considers how very unlikely it is for any, but a Person actually possessed with such a Spirit, to be the Author of such a Work. The latter is, where he frankly acknowledges, that they, who are led by such spiritual Men as himself, are in general Men of weak understanding: and happy it is, when they are so, both for themselves and others.

1

y

e

is

to

at

m g.

e-

he

er

m

of

yhe

17-

ng

But presently after this latter Passage, have him again at his old Trade, when to flatter his Dupes into the highest Thoughts (I had like to have faid Opinion) of the Authority they have on their Side, he repeats the venerable Names of no fewer than ten of the primitive Fathers. Some of whom he agrees with Dr. Middleton in abusing, as scarce one Degree above mere Fools; most of them, as wretched Scholars; but what is worst of all, he enlists every one of them into the Number of his own Bor-TOMLESS CATHOLICS, whose Religion cou'd be forged no where elfe, but in the bottomless Pit. But Happy it is for them, he has brought no other Proof for what he fays than his usual one; He says so, and therefore it is so. What an Advantage do you think it is for a Man to have his Spirit? In the former Part of his Letter he frequently, and so far I conceive justly, calls upon the Doctor for Proof. But when it comes to his own Turn, to expect fuch a Thing

G 2

from

from him, is the highest Disparagement of his absolute Authority over all that can be called Religion, Reason, common Sense, or any Thing else; so it be but to serve an End.

And fo I take my Leave of his extraordinary Letter, nor wou'd I trouble myfelf in raking longer in any of his Dunghills, were it not to have a Relish of his Poetry, after such a Surfeit of his Divinity.

This we have in a Book entitled, A Collection of Pfalms and Hymns, under the Names of him and his Brother. Where every Thing that is good will be found to be stole from Persons deflitute of their inward Light. But by Virtue of these illuminated Collectors those Works are now to far endowed with the Light, as quite to rob all Light from their own (if they be their own) Performances, which they had the Folly as well as Knavery to print along with them: By which Means these last are left like the flinking Weeks of fo many Candles put out by the powerful Rays of the Sun. Yet still thefe Men's enchanted Followers have such a Gift of the Light within them, that they can fee no Difference. This is another plain Difcovery of the Honesty of these Men's Spirit, which can teach them to pyrate other People's Properties, and fet their Names before the approved Works of nameless dead Authors promifcuoufly with their own. Which evidently appears moni.

appears to be for no other End, but to fet off their own Trash, and make themselves appear confiderable in the Eyes of all, who chance to fee any Part of the good, and overlook the rest. A fafe Way, it feems, of collecting, which without running any Risk can fully answer their pious Ends, good Men.

0

of

at

as r-ks

as

be he

th

ke

ut iff

. 2 àn

if-

it,

e's

p-

-01 tly

ars

I suppose you will conclude it enough to have only two Proofs of these Men's poetic Fire from their Light within; in which you will always find them to be upon the Marvellous. The former shall be from the first Stanza of their Performance called A Thought of Affliction on, p. 32. 12mo. Which is as follows, only thele intoired Meriod 1. Wilt thou, O Lord, regard my Tears on The Fruit of Guilt and Fear? ham a lo Me, who thy Justice have provok'd, A stow o will thy Mercy spare one I sale bala-after this, is call in One wou'd think all this Force and Dulness cou'd hardly ever proceed from Invention; but from some difficult Translation; with which, notwithstanding all their Light within, they were far more hard put to it, than ever Sternbold and Hopkins were at their greateft Pinches.

But this is over-reached a whole Bar's Length (p. 61.) afterwards, in that inimitable Piece called, A Prayer for one that is Lunatic. The first and fifth Triplets of which run (or rather hobble) thus, 1. Fefu!

fo

re

W

to

pl

Ca

V

in an

x.

of

fh

in

th

P

tr

E

te

h

I

to

fe

th

tl

tl

f

Hear our Gall; fave us all

By thy Death and Passion, &c.

Jesu! wound the Dragon, wound him;

Make him roar, Break his Power,

Let thine Arm confound him, &c.

Did ever Mortal hear such Rant put up by People in their Wits, by Way of Prayer to God for the Distressed? This, if suited by a Tune agreeable to the proper Measure, might well pass for the second Part of the Ballad of mad Tom; tho', I dare say, not half so well composed as the first. By which, it seems, these inspired Methodists conceive no Method more proper to apply to Heaven in the Behalf of a mad Person, than by acting as if they were stark mad themselves.

And the Performance, which follows next after this, is cast in the very same Mould. All which may sufficiently convince us, that these two Murderers of Sense as well as Souls are just about as fitly cut out for Poets, as a lame Horse wou'd be for a Rope-dancer. Nor wou'd their Works deserve any Thing else, but to be laught at, were it not in Indignation to see them thus employed in abusing God himself. A Thing most horrible to think of!

But what is most grievous, is to see these Tools themselves impose upon so many Creatures in human Shape, as to gain so fatal a Predominancy over them, that they are not only followed, but even adored by them. This can be resolved into Nothing but that high Opinion, which the most ignorant Persons are usually apt to have of their own Knowledge and Accomplishments, especially in Matters of Religion. And the Religion of these Seducers is exactly calculated to humour such fort of People in this Vice. A Vice, which Christianity is especially intended to drive from the Heart [Luke xvi. 15. and xviii. 10-14. Rom. xii. 3, 16. 1 Cor. x. 12. Phil. ii. 12, &c.] Nor do I know of any Thing, wherein Men can commonly shew a better Proof of their Self-denial, than in resolutely subduing this Traytor within. But these Men, as has been observed, teach such Persons under the Cloak of their Spirit, to trust in nothing but themselves; till in the End, as a just Punishment of their wilful Contempt of the Commandments of God: God himself, as St. Paul has said, fends them strong Delufion, that they shou'd believe a Lie (2 Thef. ii. 11.) which we see exactly verified in the deluded Followers of these wretched Impostors. For as foon as once they come to be poffessed with an Opinion of the Light within them; there is an End of all further Hopes of them, without a Miracle of Mercy. This is the Height of that Malignity, which Solomon speaks of, Prov. xxvi. 12: when a Man removes that Trust, to his own Heart which he

of

b

P

p

m

h

CC

ar

be

Sa

yo

ar

fu

lei

fee

Ci loc

Li

Pa

de

fin

po

po

rep

pol

bat

bat

he ought only to place upon God, (Prov. xxvii. 6.) A Malignity to which Men are always too prone. The Heart of itself, we know, is deceitful above all Things [Ferem. xvii. 9.] and it is in Nothing more apt to mifguide Men, than by perfuading them, that they are most of all pleasing God, when they are only pleasing themselves. And as this Malignity is known to be most prevalent among the less discerning; so it is most notorious, that these Hypocrites seldom gain Proselytes but among them, or fuch as have fome End to ferve by it. Pure Christianity, among us, is always their Pretence: but if we measure them by the Standard of the abovementioned Letter, it appears as plain as the Noon-Day Sun, that this is fo for no other Reason, but because they live in a Christian Country: All Religions being alike to them (Mahometism or Paganism) as well as Christianity.

And now after all, one wou'd hope few Arguments needful to convince Men of the great Wickedness and Danger (as well as Folly) of wittingly giving the least Countenance to fuch Impostors. Tho' at present you may profess yourself not to be their Follower; yet it is certain, that you countenance them every Time you go to hear them; this being the utmost for the Time they defire of you. You have here plainly faid before you their whole Aim

y gs,

S

0

is

n

۲,

at

e-n)

he

y) to

ay et ry it-

ou

ole

im

Aim and End, which shou'd make you as much afraid to come near their Affemblies; as you wou'd be to put your Hand into the Den of a Cockatrice. You have heard how dreadfully the facred Names of God and Christ are blasphemed by them to serve their wicked Purposes; and if you expect to find their Purposes changed, I am afraid you will be much mistaken. Perhaps, you will say you have hitherto heard no Hurt from them. Pray, confider honeftly with yourfelf, whether you are a competent Judge of this. For Hypocrify being their Trade, and the utmost feeming Sanctity their Disguise; it is no Wonder for you to take all they fay for Good, while you are entirely ignorant of their Defign, and still suppose them to be what they appear. But left you shou'd take the gifted Teacher, who feems now to have fixed his Habitation in this City, to be of a different Cast; be pleased to look at a Part of that short Specimen of his Light within, which he has taken fo much Pains to difperfe about the Neighbourhood, under the facred Text, Swear not at all: and if you find so much Turpitude in his studied Composures, what can be expected from his extempore Effusions? The only Words of it, I shall repeat, are these. He that believeth on [I suppose he intends in bim [i.e. Christ within] bath everlasting Life. Mark that Word: He bath it. He bath it now. He bath the Begingrim from Swearing or Hay other Impiety.

ning of Heaven even upon Earth: For his Soul is fitted with the Love of God: And the Love of God is Heaven. [Mark that too.] Hethattruly believes on [I imagine he still intends in] Jesus Christ, bath a Peace which Earth cannot give: His Mind is abways calm; be bath in every State therewith to be content : He is always eafy, quiet, well pleased; always bappy in Life and in Death. Here again you have a Description how much one of these Pharilaical Boasters thinks himself above every one else. And you ftill fee that their Spirit refolves all Religion into the full -Affurance and Complacency, they can take in themselves. Nothing can either shame or grieve them. But this Man seems to give us a further Inlight, if we can guels at any Thing from his Words, that, when Men are once bewitched into an Opinion of this Light within, they take their God, their Christ, and themselves to be all the same Being. So that what they mean by the Love of God is still nothing else, but the Love of their own dear selves; which it seems is this Man's only Heaven: in which how happy foever he may boaft himself to be, at present, we have the utmost Reason to believe; if he knew himself better here, it wou'd be much better for him hereafter. And when we see him cease from being fo affiduous in deluding Men to blafpheme, we may judge him less hypocritical in the Shew he makes of his great Zeal to deter them from Swearing or any other Impiety. But e

ly

rd

n

rs

on

ney

er

ns

at

en

his

At,

So

95 wn

nly

ay

the

felf

im

om

laf

lin

eter

But

But if any Credit can be given to those, who, we have good Reason to believe, are far more worthy of Credit, than one like him; we have all the Evidence that can be defired, that himfelf and his Abettors are remarkable for being, not only most impious Blasphemers of God, but also the most wicked Damners of their Brethren, that can any where be met with. For what elfe means the blafphemous Authority, they are fo frequently known to assume to themselves, in pronouncing whom they please to be damned? Can a common-Swearer be more culpable than these in his Curses of others? Surely no: for his Heart feldom goes along with his Words: whereas these (it is to be feared,) do it with the utmost Pride and Malice of Heart, whatever they hypocritically pretend to the contrary. So that the utmost in this Case we can resolve the common-Swearer's Curses into, is a most profane taking of God's facred Name in vain. But shou'd we allow him to be as bad as they, in thus belching out the Venom of his Heart; yet generally he is short by a League of their Wickedness, in pretending also the Authority of God for what he does. And are these Men, think we, fit Declaimers against common-Swearing, and such zealous Lovers of Souls, as upon every Occasion they pretend? But enough has been shewn to convince us, that they can always fay what they please, and make a Handle of any Thing to ferve their Turn, H 2

Again let this diabolical Gratification of their Pride remind you of the fecret Cabals, which they are known fo frequently to hold together. What can be expected from them in private, who dare be thus wicked in public? Certainly nothing good. They tell us these Meetings are only meant for the Exhortation of one another to provoke unto Love, and to good Works. [Heb. x. 24, 25.] They want not Scripture Phrases to meet us with upon every Turn. Nor can we otherwise know what is done in them, than by fuch as through some Disgust have deferted them. I will not fay, they yet go fo far as their devout Predecessors the Adamites: but this I dare venture to affirm and prove, that both are led by the same Spirit. And if the Leader, they now have, be their Father-Confessor, as some say he is; we may judge of his Accomplishment for the Work, from the excellent Performances, he has given in Print to them, that cannot find Leisure to hear the Inspirations immediately breathed into him from his Spirit. But to deliver the most charitable Thought we can have of these Cabals at present, is to suppose them intended for no other End than to afford them a freer Opportunity without Witnesses to please and gratify their Pharisaical Pride, (which we know by them is generally interpreted Edification) in repeating their own supposed Excellencies, to which their Neighbour's Foibles

1

t

(

must always be their Foil. This at a Tea-Table is commonly called Scandal: but it wou'd be Scandal indeed to hear any one resent whatever comes from their Tongues, as worthy of such a Name. Nor can any Christian scarce think of a greater Scandal to himself, than to have it judged by others, that he belongs to a Class of Men, who are such a Shame to Christianity. And I challenge the World, among all their pretended Converts, to find one Person ever converted to any Thing by them, unless it be to Pride, Affectation, and Hypocrify; while others are driven into the blackest Despair, because they find themselves incapable ever to reach their boasted Persections.

t

b

.

y

١,

n

ı-ı

a-

or

er

ve

fi-

1-

les

fl

But for any true Change of Heart made in them from worse to better, you may judge by this one Instance. Among such a Number of Converts, if they were all fuch as Christ requires, it can hardly be expected but, as the World goes, there must be some Zaccheus's among them, who have formerly been guilty of defrauding or oppressing others in their just Property. Was it then ever heard, that any Person was so far wrought upon by these Men's Preaching, as to think it afterwards his Duty to make the least Restitution or Satisfaction for what he had before unjustly gotten; without which yet we know no Person can be fuch a Penitent, as Christ will accept? No, the Christ of these Deceivers wants no such Converts, nor were they ever known to infift upon the leaft Refemblance of it; unless fo far as they can convert by it fomething into their own Pockets. But the most dreadful Consideration to deter you from these Men's Assemblies is the great Danger of it to yourfelf. Tertullian in his Treatife of Shews attefts it as a Fact of his own Knowledge, that a certain Christian Woman, having been at a Heathen Theatre, deturned back possessed with a Devil. And the unclean Spirit being afterwards asked, How he durft make this Attempt upon a Christian? made Answer; I have Reason for so doing, having found her at my own House. When therefore at any Time you are tempted through an idle Curiofity to go to hear any of these Declaimers, confider well what you are doing. You are going to hear the facred Names of God and Christ blasphemed to the worst of Parpoles, your hely Religion impiously mocked, and the fenfeles Effusions of a diffembling Hypocrite interpreted to be the Language of the Holy Ghoft. You may perhaps think yourfelf fafe enough from being feduced by fuch a Person; but I am afraid several, who have thought themselves as safe in that Respect as you, have yet returned back bewitched into a quite contrary Mind. And certainly you need not be possessed with a worse Devil, than the Spirit of the above-mention'd Letter-writer. The Devil has his Converts, as well as God, and verts and who knows, but after such a Contempt put upon your Redeemer, you may be left as a Prey to him that desires nothing more than your Destruction?

en

s

-

9-

e

e

13

g, en

gh

fe

g. od

11-

d,

y-

he ar-

na

ave

as

o a eed

the ter.

and

In fine, scarce any Consideration can be more melancholy, than the Ravage we fee made by these Emissaries of Satan among us at present. Which seems to be a Judgment of Heaven upon these Nations for the prophane Contempt, which has so long been put upon all Things facred and religious. Certainly, no Calamity has befallen us for many Years, which called near fo loudly for the folemn Fasts and Humiliations of the Church, to befeech God to preserve us from the Vengeance, which these abominable Blasphemies and daring Impieties threaten every Day to bring upon us. And for these deluded People themselves, we know of no better Means to bring them back again to their right Minds, than by fuch constant and earnest Intercessions put up for them at the Throne of Grace; if God peradventure will give them Repentance to the acknowledging of the Truth; and that they may recover themselves out of the Snare of the Devil, who are thus taken Captive by bim at his Will [2 Tim. 11. 25, 26.

and who knows, but extended a Contempt out who won the contempt of the contemp

In the feares any Confideration can be more melencholy, than the Ravage we dea made by thele Emillaries of Satan among us at prefent. Which leeps to be a Judement of Heaven upon these Ivacous for the propland Contempt, which has to long teen put chen all Things facted and religious. "Certainly, no Calamiry has befallen us for many Years; which called near to foundly for the folemn Faits and Humiliations of the Church, to befeech God to preferve us from the Venecance, which these abominable Blat hemies and daring in picties threaten every Day to bring upith us, And for thele delucted Decolo themielres, we know of no better Meet of bring them back leane and earnest Medically out up for them at the Throne of Grace; if God her adsenture will give then Referrance to the acknowledding of the Truth; and that they may recent themlibrar out of the Sna c of the D cit, and hie thus tak n Cortice by him at his will a Tim. 1.02 .75 11

STINIS

